Dear Dr. Dong-Keun Shin,

Thank you for your letter dated January 6th, 2011 inviting me to attend the press conference of your newly-created computer science works which will be held on February 25th, 2011 in Seoul, Korea. However, even if what you have mentioned in the letter is quite interesting and might be useful for today and future's use, it is considered that there is nothing much relevant to our fields of work at the moment. In addition, due to my tight schedule during this month, I'm afraid that I'm unable to attend the abovementioned press conference. Anyway, I do hope to have an opportunity to take part in this kind of event in the future.

Once again, I really appreciate your invitation.

Yours sincerely,

Colonel

Thank you for your letter dated 14 January 2011.

St Hilda's is a college of the University of Oxford, teaching undergraduates. We are not a research centre, and do not have any students studying Computer Sciences. We are not therefore able to evaluate your work and cannot endorse it as we are not in a position to do so. Dear Dr. Shin,

I should like to thank you for your recent letter dated January 14th which was addressed to The Buckinghamshire College.

First, I would like to point out that Buckinghamshire College is now known as Buckinghamshire New University. Second, I'm afraid I have to advise that your field of research does not fall within any of our specialist areas so we do not have the expertise to evaluate your work.

Therefore, we are unable to support your claim and are unable to enter into any further correspondence regarding this matter.
